

Inspector: EMS Quarters Livable; Move On Hold For Now

Kevin Fitzsimmons | Web Producer

<http://www.wfmz.com/berksnews/28025763/detail.html>

Posted: 6:05 pm EDT May 25, 2011

AMITY TWP., Pa. -- Some Southern Berks paramedics won't be moving out of their station in Amity Township as soon as they expected.

The paramedics said there were bugs, stained ceilings, stained floors and mold inside the building.

But officials said Wednesday that tests have shown there's no health threat from mold and the building is livable.

EMS workers won't be relocating to a hotel, as had been the temporary plan, but they are still planning to move to a new station.